Professional Negligence

Our team is well respected for advising in disputes involving the provision of professional services whether that is the instruction of a solicitor in the handling of a divorce or an accountant preparing companies accounts. We act on behalf of all types of claimants; both organisations and individuals, and pride ourselves on delivering clear and commercially focused advice in this complex area of law requiring specific litigation experience and expertise.

We understand that the main driver for clients is the early resolution of disputes on acceptable financial terms and with that in mind, although we have considerable trial experience, we support all forms of alternative dispute resolution and seek to successfully resolve claims through mediation on a regular basis.

Our areas of expertise include acting for businesses and individual claimants against professionals such as: accountants, architects, barristers, engineers, financial advisors, insurance brokers, solicitors, surveyors and valuers.

Our recent cases include:

- Acting for an individual in a claim against former solicitors for failure to advise fully on costs consequences and merits of case
- Acting for two individuals in pursuing a claim against a financial advisor in respect of entering into Enterprise Investment Schemes
- Acting for an individual in a claim against a former solicitor for negligent advice on the financial implications arising out of the structure of a divorce settlement
- Acting for a company in a claim against solicitors who gave negligent advice in a property transaction causing substantial loss.
