FURTHER EDUCATION IN CRISIS

The announcement of a 24% cut to the adult education budget in England is a massive blow to the lifelong learning sector. Proposed cuts risk decimating further education provision and leaving many of the most vulnerable adults without crucial opportunities to improve their education.

These cuts are devastating for all those involved in further education – the millions of people who missed out on qualifications at school or need to retrain and the dedicated hardworking college staff who provide an essential service to their community. That's why UCU is campaigning to save the colleges we love.

WE #lovefe

UCU believes that lifelong learning benefits individuals, families, the economy and society as whole. Our further education colleges play a crucial role in empowering people to realise their potential and are a key pathway to higher education for many.

We #lovefe because we know that, through education, learners at all ages and from all backgrounds are happier, healthier and more prosperous.

SUPPORT THE CAMPAIGN TO SAVE FURTHER EDUCATION

People from across the further education sector have come together to form an unprecedented broad-based campaign calling for properly funded lifelong learning. The time has come for us to stand together to defend FE.

The campaign has already received a fantastic response and thousands across the country have shown support by lobbying MPs, taking part in marches and meetings and signing our petition (over 40,000 signatures). We can save adult learning but we need your help. Please visit our website for more details.
